Masterful, and put at the top of her column a statement that Mrs. Felton was free to write what she pleased, but that the paper was in no sense bound to agree with her views or give them editorial support. Masterful, and put at the top of her column a statement that Mrs. should be greatly reduced and it can ed, as of course they must be, be no raduced, according to the presistructive plan that he urges.

It is certainly no time to continue to spend $50,000,000 a year to making up lesses when better operation of our merbusiness proposition that the presider has placed before congress, and he puts it plainly when he have: "When your executive government knows of public expenditures aggregating fifty millions annually, which it believes could be refuced by half through a change of polpublic trust if such a change were not commended; may if it were not insistently usged. And the pity of it is that our present expenditure in leases is not constructive. It looks to no fu-

BARBORD'S RETIREMENT.

What a loss has been experienced by to enter business and expresses the view ance that he wanted and expected. cate of the idea of making a place for the younger men he is destrous of do ing his part in putting that into practice. He thus makes way for younger officers after a period of $2 years serrice, but he at the same time deprives the army of an official whose services it ean ill afford to lose.

General Harbord is a graduate of an agricultural college and not a military institution, but that fact makes his career stand out all the more creditably to himself and that institution. It well known, especially in military circies, what value was attached to his ability in the army. It is impossible to cover up the magnificent service he rendered at the head of the marines in France, or the even greater work that he directed when recalled to be chief of staff of the expeditionary forces. And even now the fact that he has been the regard in which his services have been held. of the steps that brings its commendations when officials are on the verge of sent, There have been several soon, such instances where retirements have been sought in advance of the actual date such action would prevent the discharge of the school would prevent the discharge of the trunk lines is being expressed before the country, but in the retirement of General Harbord at this time at is impossible to overlook the loss that will be declarated. Others will be advanced but all army officers will be advanced but all army officers.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Shecial to The Bulletin) Washington, D. C. Nov. 21.-When congress convened yesterday at noon, it was the senate that drew the crowds. And it was on the white haired lady from Georgia. Mrs. Felton, on whom all inte-rest centered. For Mrs. Felton aspired to serve at least one day in the senate of the United States under appointment of the governor from Georgia, who sat in the back row on the democratic side abundant their injurious habits multi-of the senate, with her credentials rolled ply. It behoves us not to exterminate tightly in her hand. She took no chances the crow, but to see that its numbers do of being suddenly called to the rostrum. Her lamp was filled and burning, even though the opportunity of presentation of her claim did not come. Mrs. Felton is of medium height, and her 87 years of strenuous life are plainly written on her pale face, by lines and wrinkles. Mrs. Felton bore her honors with dignity but as she sat in the back row of the sen-ate chamber, surrounded by admiring southerners, she "looked her age," although making a picturesque figure in a simple dress of black, wearing a big lace fichu of rare old lace and with her abundant white hair piled high on her head great deal has been said and written about the value of enthusiasm, and, while we must not under estimate its place in our personal lives or in our busliness activities, it is well to bear in mind the wisdom of Goethe's observation that, "enthusiasm is of the greatest value, when we are not carried away by it." Even in the matter of saving there is such a thing as being carried away by enthusiasm. The miser is an example of this. In order to save and get ahead steadily it is vital that we always keep our feet on the solid ground of prudence. To be effective, saving must be con-inuous. The person who pinches and tinuous. The person who pinches and saves every possible penny for a short time and then gives up and quits, will never reach the goal of independence or success. Therefore, it is well always to have in mind the matter of moderation. Saving a reasonable amount regularly gives ever increasing stabilization and
